Thank you for running my article, "Strengthening Your Brand for the 21st Century." I enjoyed working on this piece and would enjoy the opportunity to work on similar projects in the future. You ①might already notice the mistake in the website address ②provided as a reference for the readers. Because it was a primary resource, I wanted to bring it to your attention in case you are considering ③ submitting a correction in your next issue. I would hate for readers ④to go to an inappropriate or irrelevant website to look for answers to their questions. I referred to the original submission I sent over and was relieved to know ⑤that the mistake was not on my end. I think the article turned out well with the exception of the website mishap. Again, I appreciate the opportunity to work on this assignment.

Last Tuesday, I observed a group of teenagers from our neighborhood ①conducting a peaceful protest in front of your plant. They said they were protesting your toxics release inventory (TRI) data, ②which had been reported in the local newspaper the previous day. In addition to marching near your front gate, they were chanting and carrying signs ③advocating "Environmental Justice" and "Clear the Air for Everyone." I believe that the teens were conducting their protest ④responsibly. As your car approached the plant, I was surprised to see you drive dangerously close to the protesters. I also heard you insult the protesters. I believe you owe these young citizens an apology. If your plant is releasing toxic vapors ⑤affected our health, then you must stop it immediately. If you do not apologize, I will encourage the protesters to bring this matter to the attention of our city and state government officials.

I now find it interesting and a bit ①amuse that one of my first encounters with newspapers was one of disrespect. In the early days of our brand, Jay and I tried ②to advertise for distributors in the classified sections of newspapers. The advertisement simply ③read: "Make $1,000 a month part time. Complete training available." A lot of papers wouldn't run our ad because we couldn't guarantee the claim. I responded ④that I couldn't guarantee the income but at least the opportunity was there for anyone who wanted to work. A lot of people were disrespectful to Jay and me and our business. They ridiculed us and said that our business would never work. We learned to just ignore people like that. If you believe in ⑤what you're doing, you have to move forward against the disrespectful crowd. As Jay liked to say, "The dogs may bark, but the caravan moves on."

I read the review of Social Distortion by Jack Churchill and couldn't have been more let down. It felt like a book report written by a child. Churchill made no attempt ①to describe parts of the set list, or the highs and lows of the show, but instead wrote, "The songs all sound the same." He ignored the parts of the show ②which Mike Ness stopped to talk about the inspiration for some of his songs and opened up to the audience. The only reason I can think of ③that you would even print this uninspired review is to use the photos ④that were taken at the show. I can appreciate a negative review of a concert as long as it is well reasoned, but there is no explanation or reason here. It is just a lazy and tired excuse for an article. I ask that you please take more care in choosing ⑤what you print.
